NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, AUGUST 16, 1862. PRICE TWO CENTS.

FROM THE ARMY OF VIRGINIA.

The Rebels Still Retreating Beyond the Rapidan.

JACKSON'S ARMY 60,000 STRONG.

Our Forces About to Cross the Rapidan.

Sabbath Headquarters, near Rappahannock Station, Friday, Aug. 15.

The enemy are still reported retreating beyond the Rapidan River, although they have a force on the other side, with guns in position, and a large body of cavalry in the neighborhood, supposed to be merely covering the retreat of the main body.

Gen. Bayard is in the advance, with Gen. Buford's and Gen. Rankin's Cavalry, and some artillery.

The river is easily fordable at many points.

It is stated that Stonewall Jackson's army numbers at least 60,000 men. He has managed to move them all of safety, concealing a few stragglers.

Some of the rebels came into our camp last night, and said that almost all the Virginia soldiers would desert, if they thought but they would be well treated.

A Union soldier was found in the woods on Wednesday with his musket barred grasped in both hands. The stock was broken off, and eleven dead rebels were lying around him—some with their heads smashed and others bayoneted in various ways—all dead. This shows with what desperation the Union hero had fought for his life, but without avail. His body was pierced with three bullets.

Many of the enemy's dead were left unburied, while others were only half covered. In many places arms and feet were seen above the earth.

Some thirty-six wounded prisoners, concealed near the battle-field in houses, were brought in to-day.

REPORTS FROM CULPEPPER COURT-HOUSE.

Culpeper, Va., Wednesday, Aug. 13.

Yesterday Gen. Pope captured a reconnoissance in force of the enemy's position in and around Slaughter Mountain, and a large cavalry force, together with two regiments of infantry and a battery and several miscellaneous marauders, in command of Gen. Stuart, were pushed forward about noon. On obtaining a view of Mountain Slopes, two regiments of rebel cavalry and a large body of infantry, and, it is believed, some guns, were discovered. When within range, our battery threw several shots and shells into the cavalry, and Bayard's Cavalry commenced made a right flank movement as the rear line the infantry had some cavalry made a left flank movement. These movements, and the effect of our battery, compelled the enemy to draw behind the mountain on the Orange road. On reaching the mountain it was discovered that the enemy's main body had previously retired by the Orange road, and crossed the Rapidan, and there seen there just before were join the rear guard.

Gen. Bayard was then detached to make a detour to the right to intercept the rear guard of the enemy, and cut them off; and it is reported this morning (not on official authority, however,) that he penetrated Orange Court House last night, but found that the enemy had retreated to Gordonsville. On passing the location of the enemy's batteries, the effect of our guns of Saturday was astonishing. Many of the shell had hit the very spot where the guns stood and the earth was furrowed with shot. Several dead horses lay scattered about and the trees in the rear were cut down.

We hold possession of the ground and this morning an advance has been made by a portion of our main body.

The following are some of the casualties caused by the enemy's shelling our camps on Saturday night, after the arrival of Gen. Pope with reinforcements.

TWELFTH MASSACHUSETTS.

Killed—Capt. Shurtleff.

Wounded—Capts. Ripley and Harman; privates Reach, Conly, O'Donnell, Cowvey and Halter.

It was this regiment heretofore mentioned as having formed into line of battle, and delivered several volleys upon the enemy's cavalry, when they were charging upon Gens. Pope and Banks on the right. This undoubtedly saved those Generals from capture or death. The Twelfth had never before been in action, and have been complimented by Gen. Pope for their conduct on this sudden emergency.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTH NEW-YORK.

Wounded—John Thomas, Adam Fox, John H. Peck, Mills Eastman, Wm. R. Crane, Jacob Myers, Israel Patterson, James G. Havenagh.

ONE HUNDRED AND SEVENTH PENNSYLVANIA.

Wounded—Thomas Firth, Edw. Riley, Ed. Felter—all slightly.

The Eleventh Pennsylvania had three wounded and two missing.

The Ninth New-York State Militia had three killed and two wounded.

Tompkins's Battery aided Cowan's Battery in returning the fire of the rebel batteries, and in shelling the woods where the enemy's infantry were concealed.

Prisoners state that Jackson supposed the only troops in the rear of the woods were those of Banks' corps, who were in the fight, and threw a large force over the creek late and through the woods to completely rout us, but the reception he met with compelled a sudden retreat and an abandonment of his midnight enterprise.

Over 700 of our wounded have already been sent to Alexandria and Washington. Among the volunteer Surgeons who have been unremitting in their attentions to the wounded, is the Surgeon-General of the State of Maine. He was opportunely present, and has been confined in the hospital in a professional way from the moment the first wounded were brought into it, until the present moment. Dr. Craane, Medical Director of Gen. Williams' Division, and the Medical Director of Gen. Augur's Division, have shown the greatest ability to meet the emergency.

Gen. Banks' corps has retired from the front to encamp, and reorganize the reduced regiments.

Col. Donnelly still survives, and is personally sensible of all that passes. Not a groan has escaped him from the first, which is characteristic of the man.

Gen. A. S. Williams, of Gen. Banks' corps, first division, is military Governor and Supervisor of Railroads and Telegraphs in this place.

Culpeper, Wednesday, Aug. 13—10½ P. M.

It is reported that Stonewall Jackson encamped last night near Orange Court-house, on Barler's Creek, and also occupied Southwest Mountain.

Gen. Pope's forces have advanced toward Orange.

Gen. Burnside returned to camp yesterday. From the best data attainable, it is thought that Jackson's rear line is about four miles back of the Rapidan, while his main point of defence is Gordonsville.

It is also reported that large forces of the enemy now occupy the line of the Central Railroad from Louisa to Charlottesville. From this, it would appear, they have formed a new line of defence, and intend to fight a decisive battle at or near Gordonsville.

Gen. Pope took many prisoners, some of whom

THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

Gen. McClellan's Movement said to be an Entire Success.

Philadelphia, Friday, Aug. 15.

There is a rumor current here, which is based on good authority, that Gen. McClellan's late movements on the Peninsula have been conducted with entire safety to his command.

THE REGENERATE BRIGADE AT MALVERN HILL.

BRIGADE—OUR FRIENDS—APPEARANCE OF THE BATTLE-FIELD—A REBEL WOMAN THE ONLY MOURNER AT THE FUNERAL OF A YANKEE BOY.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

Camp Near Harrison's Landing, Va., Saturday, Aug. 9, 1862.

Long ere you will have received this, you will have learned by telegraph of the successful reconnoissance to Malvern Hills. The Regenerate Brigade, as usual, was on hand, for what did the Army of the Potomac make a move in which they did not participate, and so, while Gen. Banks was speeding to the frowers of New-York for men to fill up his shattered brigade, that brigade was quietly but swiftly marching toward the sound of a contest never to be forgotten.

They left camp about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and marched until after midnight. All agreed that they never witnessed such a beautiful march. The roads were as level as a bare floor—unlike what they had been, there was no dust, and as they silently moved along the light of the full moon was reflected from the forest of glittering bayonets. At last they halted for the night, and bivouacked under that cloudless, star-lit sky.

Just as day was breaking all were again drawn in line, and were about starting, when we reached our guns. The Regenerate Brigade were drawn up in line, and in their rear was Pratt's Light Battery and to the left of that a team. In that here a Captain of rebel cavalry and his Orderly were sleeping. We had command so quietly that they did not awaken, and as they rode out in the morning they suddenly found the artillery. Comprehending the situation in an instant, they struck for the woods in front of the Sickles Brigade, could loud cries from the artillerymen of "Stop those men!"

They were well mounted on splendid horses, and were in the woods in an instant. The men had been ordered to load without capping, but several of the Fourth and Fifth Regiments succeeded in remodying that deficiency soon enough to get a shot at them. The Captain's horse, frightened by the flash, fell, and his rider was a prisoner. The Orderly escaped. The Captain was splendidly mounted and armed with three revolvers and a sabre.

The column now pushed rapidly forward, passing the remains of a rebel camp, and struck the road to Malvern at the Church at Nelson Farm, used as a depot for the wounded at the battle of Glendale, and the scene of a cavalry skirmish on the Sunday of that week of battles. From there the road showed evidences of war—trees broken by cannon shot, and pierced by musketry, the skeletons of horses, cannon balls lying in the road, &c.

In a few minutes the boom of artillery announced that the ball had opened; quicker and quicker came the reports. The explosion of the shell came nearer and nearer, as the column moved forward; soon they whistled over our heads, and a few wounded men were seen, while, from under the trees at the farmers brick house, could be seen the flash of the enemy's guns. In a few minutes, however, it ceased, and we were once more masters of Malvern Hills, while our cavalry was in hot pursuit of the flying enemy, who were shuffling up the New-Market Road to Richmond.

The old brick house looked natural. The beautiful lawn about it, which we left covered with dead and wounded, was bare and trodden down, but the field of battle was covered with a beautiful growth of verdure. Directly upon one side of this house two of the enemy's guns had been placed. The track made by their recoil was plainly to be seen, and the trees on either side and the house itself bore good evidence to the accuracy of Kanaan's fire. One rebel has horribly mangled by a shell, while in each of his hands he still clasped one of the deadly missiles they intended to have hurled at us.

With the exception of cannon balls and skeletons of horses scattered around, the houses and trees bearing marks of the balls, and the trenches where the dead were buried, there was little to indicate the battle ground. Kane's house was deserted, and bore a most desolate aspect. We took a number of prisoners, two of whom were Jerseymen, from Newark and Rahway respectively. They were as strong secesh as the natives.

In the afternoon, Gens. McClellan and Sumner arrived upon the ground, and with Gen. Hooker, now a Major-General, they enjoyed quite a lengthy chat.

Considerable regret was manifested that we did not bag the rebels, but the prisoners stated, what was no doubt true, that they were apprised of our coming at 12 o'clock the previous night. Several interesting letters were found in the deserted houses. One "true woman," though strong Secesh, describes the finding upon her farm of a dead Yankee who had died peacefully upon his blanket, spread in a retired spot. In his pocket were found letters from his mother advising him to be a good boy, and reconciliating him to put his trust in the God of battles. She states that she went and looked at him, and then came back to the house and had, as she expresses it, a "good old cry" about it.

Another lady, writing from Richmond, inquires all about the battle with a curious minuteness that only a woman could exhibit, and then finishes by saying, "Don't bury any dead Yankee on our farm, for I don't want to sit front seats from Yankee stock." Which of these two women does most honor to the sex?

Several of our dead and also the dead rebels were buried in the rear of the brick house—most impressive ceremonies being performed over them by the eloquent and patriotic Chaplain of the First California Regiment. GEDMA.

Arrest of a Politician for Discouraging Enlistments.

Philadelphia, Friday, Aug. 15.

The first arrest under the recent order of the War Department, is that of Jesse Auple, a notorious politician. He was arrested for discouraging enlistments, and lent to Washington this afternoon.

NEWS FROM NEW-ORLEANS

Arrival of the Steamship Saxon, with Advices to the 5th.

An Important Order from Gen. Butler.

An Assessment of the Secessionists for the Relief of the Suffering Poor.

The steamship Saxon, from New-Orleans on the 5th inst., via Key West on the 9th, arrived at this port last night. Her advices are two days later.

On the 5th, three steamers arrived at New-Orleans with flour, as follows: Creole, 3,000 bbls.; Roanoke, 2,700 bbls.; Blackstone, 2,100 bbls. and 325 sacks. Total, 14,025 bbls. and 325 sacks—making since 18,000 bbls.

Gen. Butler had issued the following important order, providing for the relief of the destitute poor of the city:

Headquarters Department of the Gulf, New-Orleans, Aug. 6, 1862.

General Order No. 56.—It appears that the need of relief in the destitute poor of the city requires more extended measures and greater outlay than have yet been made.

It becomes a question in justice upon whom should this burden fall.

Clearly upon those who have brought this great calamity upon their fellow citizens.

It should not be borne by taxation of the whole municipality, because the middling and working-men have never been heard at the ballot-box, unawed by threats and unmanacled by bloody and cruel oaths of conspirators against peace and good order. Beside, more than the vote which was claimed for secession have taken the oath of allegiance to the United States.

The United States Government does its share when it protects, defends and preserves the people in the enjoyment of law, order and calm quiet.

Those who have brought upon the city this stagnation of business, this desolation of the hearth-stone, this starvation of the poor and helpless, should, as far as they may be able, relieve distresses.

There were two classes whom it would seem peculiarly fit should at first contribute to such relief; first, those individuals and corporations who have aided the rebellion with their means; and, second, those who have endeavored to destroy the commercial prosperity of the city, upon which the welfare of its inhabitants depends.

It is brought to the knowledge of the Commanding General that a subscription of $1,250,000 was made by the corporate bodies, business firms and persons whose names are set forth in schedule "A" annexed to this order, and that sum placed in the hands of an illegal body known as the "Committee of Public Safety," for the treasonable purpose of defending the city against the Government of the United States, under whose humane rule the City of New-Orleans had enjoyed such unexampled prosperity, that her warehouses were filled with the trade of all nations who came to share her freedom, to take part in the benefits of her commercial superiority, and thus she was made the representative mart of the world.

The stupidity and wastefulness with which this immense sum was spent was only equalled by the folly which led to its being raised at all. The subscribers to this fund, by this very act, betray their treasonable designs and their ability to pay at least a much smaller tax for the relief of their destitute and starving neighbors.

Schedule "B" is a list of cotton brokers, who, claiming to control that great interest in New-Orleans, to which she is so much indebted for her wealth, published in the newspapers in October, 1861, a manifesto deliberately advising the planters not to bring their produce to the city, a measure which brought ruin at the same time upon the producer and the city.

This act sufficiently testifies the malignity of these traitors as well to the Government as their neighbors, and it is to be regretted that their ability to relieve their fellow-citizens is not equal to their facilities for injuring them.

Investing both these classes to relieve the suffering poor of New-Orleans—yes, even though the needy be the starving wives and children of those in arms at Richmond and elsewhere against the United States—it will be impossible to make a mistake save in having the assessment too heavy and the tax too light.

It is therefore ordered—

First—That the persons in schedules annexed, marked "A" and "B," set against the names of the several

A REMONSTRANCE AGAINST THE CONSCRIPT LAW.

Some of the Richmond papers publish a curious document, entitled, "The Petition of Certain Non-Chemists Respectfully Presented to the Confederate States Congress." It opens thus:

"To the Speaker and Members of Congress of the Confederate States of America: Your petitioners respectfully represent that they are all over the age of eighteen years, and other than age of eighteen years. They are all "enrolled in the military service of the Confederate States," previous to the 16th day of April, 1862, the date of the Conscript act. Your petitioners have been to themselves mustered and sworn into the service for twelve months, some of whom volunteered for the war previous to the 16th day of April, 1862, and others who have not volunteered; some who have received the bounty money, and others who have not received it. Most of your petitioners had, under the call of their respective States, and the President of the Confederate States, enlisted for "three years or the war," previous to the 16th of April, 1862.

Your petitioners are from the different States of the Confederacy—some of them over 50 years old, others under 17 years of age. At the different periods of their enlistment the prospects of the army of the Confederacy were darkened, and being overshadowed by a series of mishaps, blunders, and military misadventures. The cause so dear to every true and brave Southron was, to all outward appearances, waning, and needed renewed energies and demonstrable proofs and manifestations of personal bravery and individual patriotism.

The petitioners then proceed to detail the steps successively taken by the Confederate Congress in raising an army. They say:

"On the 16th day of April, 1862, the Conscript Act became a law. The will of your honorable body, as made known in that law, by terms too plain to be mistaken, and too imperious to be lightly disregarded, annulled all previous contracts made, by volunteers, and, by explicit terms of compulsory legislation, made men under the age of thirty-five years and over eighteen years soldiers for the war, or until they attained the age of thirty-five years—thus drawing, as with "the hook of steel," every male citizen within the prescribed ages (with a few excepted cases) between ourselves and entirely from the control of their mothers, and placed them at the disposal of the President during the war. This law, had it been executed, and unaccompanied by a recipocating return to the body of society, and under the control of the different States, (that claim them in the army, expressed by your petitioners,) could never have been sustained by the States."

This law, they state, was so qualified, subsequently, that those who had previously enlisted should be discharged on July 16, 1862; but the Secretary of War issued a general order revoking this, and the remonstrance proceeds:

"Your petitioners are advised that the rights, privileges and immunities vested in them by virtue of the proviso to the said act are full and complete, attached by no conditions, and restrained by no qualifications; and that these rights admit of no intermediate and hampering restrictions, either from the Executive or Ministerial Department of the Government. They aver, most respectfully, that any interpolating or restrictive orders, whether by the Chief Magistrate or any member or more of his subordinate functionaries, to whomsoever they may temporarily have your petitioners unwilling, null and void. But they are advised that, as there is no appeal to any judicial process by which they could test this matter, as a claim, their only legitimate means of redress is through your honorable body.

"There can be no doubt that all laws passed by Congress are supreme, and challenge the entire acquiescence of the President and every Department of the Government, until they are repealed, or pronounced unconstitutional by a competent judicial tribunal. But any violation of any one or more of such laws by any Department of the Government is not less culpable than a similar violation by any other member of society.

"The reason, spirit and intention of the law in question, as well as its words, context and subject-matter, are plain and unmistakable. There is no point, no word, no object, no purpose, which is not fairly and plainly set forth. The question then presents itself, patiently, serious and vital, shall the law prevail, or shall the intervening, unauthorized interpolation of the Secretary at War prevail? Shall an army order revoke a solemn act of Congress? Shall Congress or the Executive rule the people, control the army, and legislate for the country? Have we a Constitutional Government, with specific powers granted, beyond which no Department of the Government shall pass, or have we an unlimited Government, deputized only on Executive will or Ministerial caprice? Are the people free, or is the Executive supreme?

"These are no idle questions. They are solemnly propounded, and merit a solemn response. It was legislative encroachments and Executive usurpations which destroyed the Union, never to be restored. Shall the Southern States, unchastened, yield the same destroying elements of self-destruction? The answer which your honorable body may see fit to give will descend with its weighty consequences to posterity. The voice of history is not less potent in its warnings against Executive assumption or ministerial abuse of power than the hopes of the future are dependent on your response.

"In view of the dangers which beset the country, your petitioners cannot better conclude their appeal than by adopting the significant language uttered by PATRICK HENRY, in the Virginia Convention, on the 7th January, 1788, when he exclaimed: 'The last rock of political salvation is overthrown, perpetrated from age to age in every human record, and manifested in every human battle. When the Commons of England, in the memorable contest which between themselves, said to their King, "We are one PEOPLE," then was the Temple of Liberty consecrated.

"It is with no view of avoiding danger, or shunning responsibilities, that your petitioners ask such disclaimer. Their hearts, hopes, energies, are all attached in this war. They had rather lose all and perish themselves, than fail to maintain the cardinal principle on which this war turns. They will never yield to an insolent foreign foe, or succumb to any power which seeks to subvert the inherent rights of the States, or to destroy the individual liberty of the freeborn citizen. Feeling that it is the order of revocation (General Order, No. 24) not only their rights, but the rights of the people, and the legitimate powers and functions of Congress, are invaded and usurped, they seek the proper remedy; should their services be needed, they, as all they have, will freely be offered up on the altar of constitutional liberty. But they are not prepared to yield a silent submission to the violation of your rights, or the subversion of the vested immunities, upon their title papers are derived from your honorable body.

"Your petitioners respectfully ask, that they may be fully heard before your honorable body, through their counsel. THE PETITIONERS.

By their counsel, JOHN H. GILMER.

RICHMOND, Aug. 8, 1862."

IMPRESSMENT OF SLAVES.

Some days ago, says the Macon Telegraph, the citizens of Lee County held a public meeting in reference to negro impressment, at which they appointed Mr. C. M. IRVIN to correspond with the War Department, by telegraph, and ascertain if the impressment had been authorized and required by the Secretary of War. If it had, they resolved, that they citizens, to produce in the population; if not, they determined not to surrender their negroes. In pursuance of his mission, Mr. IRVIN came to Macon, and the correspondence ensued which is published below:

To the Secretary of War, Richmond, Va.:

Brig.-Gen. MASSENA has issued an order, impressing twenty per cent. of the male slaves throughout the State. Is that order authorized by the Department? If so, we acquiesce. Otherwise, we resist.

C. M. IRVIN, for the citizens of Lee County.

RICHMOND, 5th.—Mr. C. M. IRVIN: Gen. MASSENA has not communicated with this Department in reference to impressment, nor has any authority to make impressment been asked for or granted.

G. W. RANDOLPH, Secretary of War.

THE MURDER OF GEN. CASWELL.

The Knoxville Register, of the 7th inst., gives but few additional particulars in regard to the murder of Gen. CASWELL, which took place on the night of the 5th inst., near Lenoir's Station, on the East Tennessee and Virginia Railroad. The murderers had not been overtaken when the last accounts were published. The following is the account given by the Knoxville paper:

Gen. CASWELL was a distinguished soldier, having served through the Mexican campaign. He was one of the earliest to take the field against the Rebellion, and became Colonel of the Fourth Tennessee Regiment, which he commanded at the battle of Mill Springs, where he was wounded. He was then appointed by Gov. HARRIS a Brigadier-General in the State service, and commanded the forces rendezvous at Knoxville, when he retired to private life.

FORT PULASKI AGAIN REPORTED.

The reported "heavy firing" in Hilton Head Harbor has induced us to refer to the subject in our columns, yesterday. The latest accounts are published under the telegraphic head of "The Rebellion" in the column containing the report of the Secretary of War.

RAILROAD COLLISIONS.

A serious collision occurred on last Friday morning on the Alabama and Florida Railroad, between Quincy and Tallahassee, by which two persons were killed and several wounded. On the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, near Mobile, a damage train ran into the rear end of another, setting the cars afire, and burning up a number of valuable mules and wounded.

THE GALLANT ZARVONA.

The Charleston Courier publishes a letter from Col. ZARVONA, now in prison at Fort Lafayette, to President DAVIS. One of the exchanged prisoners brought it.

FORT LAFAYETTE, U. S. A., Monday, May 5, 1862.

To the Secretary of the Confederate States, Richmond, Va.:

SIR: I am forwarded here from the great Southern I am subjected to, that it is right you should know of it. I write this on a piece of paper which fortune has placed in my way, and may reach you.

I have been a prisoner nearly two months. I have never been treated as a prisoner of war. I am now in a casemate, under military confinement. I am not allowed, even for a moment, to go out. All verbal or written communications with friends prohibited. Writing materials, paper, books, even my razor, has been taken from me. The United States Government refused to exchange or parole me. The only reason that I can get from any one is, that I am dangerous.

You may use knowledge of me. Please refer to Gen. LEE. Respectfully, ZARVONA.

MILITARY ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADJUTANT AND INSPECTOR GENERAL'S OFFICE, RICHMOND, Aug. 6, 1862.

[EXTRACT.]

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 65.—Military Commanders have no authority to suspend the writ of habeas corpus; nor does martial law, when declared by the President, under act of Congress, justify the arbitrary establishment of the price of commodities in the trade of the citizens of the Confederate States.

II. Necessity alone can warrant the impressment of private property for public use, and wherever the required supplies can be obtained by the consent of the owners, at fair rates and without hazardous delay, the military authorities will obtain from the civil proceedings of impressment.

III. Paragraph V, General Orders No. 56, Current Series, is hereby revoked; and all discharges will hereafter be made under the 11th article of War and General Order No. 26, Current Series. By order,

(Signed,) S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector-General.

ADJUTANT AND INSPECTOR-GENERAL'S OFFICE, RICHMOND, Aug. 6, 1862.

[EXTRACT.]

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 182.—II. Officers in command of troops will be held pecuniarily responsible for damage done to private property by those under them. The amount due for damages will be deducted from their pay. Persons injured in the hands of soldiers will endeavor to ascertain the name of the wrong-doer and the regiment to which he belongs, and report the same at the headquarters of the Department of Henrico.

The want of discipline in the army has, in many instances, engendered a reckless disregard of the rights of citizens which will not be longer tolerated.

By command of the Secretary of War,
JOHN WITHERS, Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF HENRICO, RICHMOND, VA., Aug. 1, 1862.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 118.—III. The obtaining of substitutes through the medium of agents is strictly forbidden. When such agents are employed, the principal, the substitute and the agent will be impressed into the military service, and the money paid for the substitute and as a reward to the agent will be confiscated to the Government. The offenders will also be subjected to such other punishment as may be imposed by a Court-martial.

By order of Brig.-Gen. JOHN R. WINDER,
Commanding Department, &c.

L. B. PAGE, Assistant Adjutant-General.

BRIGADE HEADQUARTERS, CHARPIN'S FARM, Aug. 2, 1862.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. 236.—At the suggestion of Maj.-Gen. J. LONGSTREET, commanding this division, it is ordered that all paroled officers, non-commissioned officers and privates of the Twentieth, Forty-sixth and Fifty-ninth Regiments Virginia Volunteers, assigned to this brigade, report immediately, in person, to these headquarters. By the time they join their regiments, a regular exchange will, in all probability, have been made.

By order, Brig.-Gen. HENRY A. WISE,
JAMES H. PRIOLEAU, Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS.

GEN. POPE.

From the Richmond Dispatch, Aug. 9.

The subject of this notice was born of respectable parentage. He is the son, we believe, of the late WILLIAM POPE, of Louisville, and is related to the higher respectable family of the same name in Virginia. He was educated at West Point, where he graduated about twenty years ago. Boys always give some evidence of what they are destined to be, while at school. A good boy—a boy of whom his schoolmates are fond—is almost sure to turn out a good man, and the reverse. "The boy," it has been truly said, "is father to the man." POPE was distinguished at the Academy as the most shameless liar and the most incorrigible braggart that had ever darkened the doors of that institution.

His lies were of the most offensive character; they were all about himself and his own exploits. He was the Bobadil of the school, with all his insolence, all the swagger, all the lying, and a double share of the cowardice attached to that respectable character. He had every disposition in the world to be a tyrant, and would have been had it not been for his timidity. He graduated, by some means or other, and became notorious at all the posts where he was stationed. To his school-boy accomplishments of lying and bullying he now added the graver character of a finished swindler. Few were the tradesmen within reach of the several posts at which he was stationed, who had not good reason to acknowledge his superior genius in this last-named avocation. That trait which we have mentioned as having been suppressed by fear at the Academy, began now to appear in full vigor. He dared not attempt to play the tyrant at school, because he was among his equals, and they might call him to account.

How he got his present command is better understood. LINCOLN wanted a tiger to suck blood, and he got him. He wanted a man to gain victories on paper, and POPE has just proved himself to be that man. His report to HALLECK, that he had captured 15,000 of BRAGG'S army, and 20,000 stand of arms, when he had not taken a man or a musket, stands alone in the history of lying. It left him without a rival in that respectable art. He distanced Munchausen and all other professors. It was "Eclipse first and the rest nowhere." According to the caustic observation of the London Times, Secretary STANTON has no need of armies to gain victories. He can annihilate whole hosts, and capture hundreds of guns, by a single stroke of his pen.

POPE was the right man and he put him in the right place. No man so thoroughly understands the art of gaining victories on paper; not even McCLELLAN or STANTON himself. Of this he has already given a striking proof. A band of his horsemen came to Beaver Dam Depot—where there was no force—and burnt it. They "skedaddled" as soon as they heard SHIELDS was after them. POPE announced a great victory, in terms sufficiently swelling for Austerlitz or Jena. The Bobadil of the old army, he proclaims that he has seen nothing of his enemies but their backs. We wonder if the gentlemen who cowhided him for uttering an indignity to a lady was standing with his back to him when he inflicted chastisement?

POPE has come to trouble for his laurels. He is in a fair way to lose his claim to be called the most execrable scoundrel in North America. He seems to have some suspicion of this, and hence his proclamation announcing his intention to withdraw all protection from property and persons in the country his action makes otherwise. This proclamation is without parallel. It is an open invitation to plunder. It offers a premium for murder—the premium of impunity. We yet hope to see this execrable villain and his beastly assistant expiate their crimes on the gallows, in pursuance of the President's proclamation. The fault we find with that document is that it is not sufficiently comprehensive. Why should the mongrel crew who march under the banners of LINCOLN be exempted from punishment?

THE FIGHTING FORCE OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES.

From the Richmond Whig, Aug. 12.

A writer in the Mobile Register furnishes data from which a tolerably correct idea may be obtained of the fighting force of the Confederate States. His figures are derived from the United States census tables of 1840 and 1860, and upon the assumption that the ratio of increase from 1830 to 1840 is as great as that from 1840 to 1850.

The census tables show that, in 1860, the Slave States contained a white male population of [illegible] years and upwards, of which there did between 16th and 18th, they have [illegible] population, between the ages of 18 and 30, as follows:

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

[illegible] Sent letter. I say a million of men, and make the end of the rebellion sure! Money! and—money!

D. S. DICKINSON.

FROM MEMPHIS.

Guerrilla Movements in Kentucky—Naval Blunders—Vicksburgh—Sentiment in Tennessee—Employment Engineers.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MEMPHIS, Thursday, Aug. 7, 1862.

The recent course of events in the Southwest has cast in deep apparent failing a gloom over the spirits of the friends of Union in this section, both in the army and among the Union men of Tennessee, Mississippi and Arkansas—and, what is even worse, the hopes and feelings of the Secessionists have risen in an equal degree.

The recent raid of Marmaduke into Kentucky, the astounding and almost incredible performance of the rebel gunboat Arkansas,—and, more than all, the withdrawal of our own gunboats from Vicksburgh, and the apparent abandonment of the attempt to overcome the blockade at that place, cannot fail to be regarded on both sides as either a mad exhibition of recklessness, or evidence of culpable intelligence on the part of those who have assumed the conduct of the war.

Which of these two propositions is the correct one, I do not propose to discuss now. There has been already a superabundance of complaint, lamentation, perhaps, mingled in the popular criticisms of military matters, but it is certain that to the loyal people hereabouts these recent events appear even in the light of deplorable blunders than as ordinary incidents of warfare.

Here it could be possible that a few hundred, for we cannot rate any thousands, half-armed and half-disciplined banditti should have been allowed to escape the entire vast army distributed through this region, and permitted twice to traverse the entire width of a State claiming to be loyal, plundering and destroying at pleasure, terrify three of the most populous cities of the Northwest, almost out of their wits, take possession of and hold towns situated not three hours' distance from these cities by rail, and finally succeed in safely effecting their escape.

How was it possible that our naval commanders, knowing that a formidable war-vessel, universally represented to be fully equal, if not superior, to any of theirs, was being completed at a point not difficult to reach with our gunboats, should have remained supinely at another week after week, while the monster was being made thoroughly ready for its work, and when at last it made its appearance, have been totally unprepared to receive it? Was not somebody to blame?

True, it was reported that there was not water enough in the Yazoo to enable the Arkansas to get down or our own boats to get up; yet, when the time came, she did get down, drawing more water than any boat of our fleet.

Two months ago the newspapers of the North announced, with a flourish of trumpets, that at last the blockade of the Mississippi was broken. The last stronghold of the rebels on the river had been abandoned, and henceforth the stream belonged to the United States.

And so, indeed, it seemed. When the National fleets passed Fort Pillow, the only remaining obstruction to the free navigation of the river was a few hastily-constructed and incomplete batteries at Vicksburgh. These, it was supposed, Commodore FARRAGUT would reduce without difficulty, and the general impression was that the Mississippi flotilla had accomplished the work for which it was designed, and henceforth its duties would be confined to guarding what had been obtained, and preventing any further attempts to interfere with the navigation of the river.

But, unfortunately, here, as too often before, some unlucky combination of circumstances—some lack of something or somebody—prevented our being able to follow up one success by another. The Micawberian policy was still in the ascendant. We must wait. So FARRAGUT came up to Vicksburgh, and waited, and after a while Commodore DAVIS went down to Vicksburgh, and waited also.

I do not mean to imply that they did not do, at intervals, some hard fighting. Repeatedly they succeeded in silencing the batteries, and in passing them with their war vessels, but by this time the rebels had completed their preparations, and when the hot shower became too hot, they simply retired to a place of safety, and when it was over they resumed their places at the guns. Practically, the blockade remained as complete as ever. Nor in these encounters was the damage all on one side. Nearly all our boats suffered more or less severely. At last it was announced that Vicksburgh could not be taken without the cooperation of a land force, and there was no force to send, and then the Arkansas, with its invulnerable iron walls and heavy armament, was added to the defences of the place, and so our fleets withdrew, abandoning to the enemy six hundred miles of the river, lined with fertile plantations, and leaving behind them a powerful vessel, probably superior, in defensive qualities at least, to any of our own on the river, and competent, its friends claim, to repeat upon our fleet the achievements of the Merrimac upon the Cumberland and Congress.

This is the history of the last two months, as we have seen it here. Can it be wondered at that the loyal people of Tennessee feel somewhat gloomy and dispirited as they review the record? If there be any class of persons in the country who have a deeper, a nearer interest in the speedy suppression of the rebellion than any other, it is the Union men of Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi. To them it is no mere question of principle. They have felt the grasp of tyranny in their own persons, and waiting and watching for that deliverance which seemed as if it would never come, have realized the bitter heartsickness which springs from hope deferred. And now, when the hour of their deliverance seemed at hand, they again see the dark clouds gather around the horizon, and the prospect is darker than before.

The war in this region seems to have degenerated into mere guerrilla warfare, but it is carried on on the part of the rebels with an amount of energy and audacity which promises an ample amount of trouble.

On Sunday last a force of rebel cavalry, some fifteen hundred strong, was intercepted by about two thousand of our troops at a point about eight miles from the city, and a sharp skirmish ensued, in which we lost three men killed and quite a number wounded. Several dead bodies of rebels were found on the field, and a few prisoners, also, fell into our hands. As the expedition did not return to the city, but kept on in pursuit of the enemy, I was not able to learn full particulars. It is reported that there is a large rebel camp at a point on the Memphis and Jackson Railroad, about twenty miles from this city, and it is understood that the expedition has gone in that direction; so we may anticipate hearing news of another battle shortly.

A sharp fight took place on Sunday last at Lodge Bellie Creek, a little stream running into the St. Francis River, in Arkansas, about forty miles southwest of this place. A portion of the First Wisconsin Cavalry, under Col. DAVIDSON, had come down from Bloomfield for the purpose of protecting a portion of Gen. CURRY' train, which had been delayed. The First and Third Battalions, under command of Lieut.-Col. DAVIDSON, camped on Saturday at Marlock, near Madison, the present terminus of the Memphis and Little Rock Railroad. The Second Battalion, commanded by Maj. ROBINSON, was encamped at the crossing of Longpelle Creek, about fifteen miles from Madison. Maj. ROBINSON's command numbered about one hundred and twenty men. At daylight on Sunday there were suddenly surrounded by [illegible] time to mount, but hastily formed on foot in the centre of the camp, and kept up a heavy fire with their Belgian rifled muskets for a few minutes, until the Texans finding they took falling all around suddenly charged upon them over the little body of Wisconsin, scattering them in all directions. Major ROBINSON, with a few of his men, succeeded in getting their way through and escaped. Fourteen of our men were killed on the spot, forty-five wounded and thirty taken away as prisoners. The Texans also captured twenty wagons belonging to the regiment. Twenty-six of the Texans were killed in the affray and a large number wounded, how many my informant could not ascertain. The wounded men of the Nationals were left at houses near the battle-field, but the Texans took their own wounded away with them. Among the killed was Rev. Mr. DUNMOR, Chaplain of the First Wisconsin, a gentleman formerly well-known as an energetic and highly successful missionary in Ohio.

On their way down, a few days before, Major ROBINSON had made prisoners of two prominent citizens of Madison, Col. GROGAN, acting Provost-Marshal of the town, under a commission from Gen. HUNTER, and Mr. HUNTER, keeper of the jail. Both these men were with the battalion when the attack was made, and both were killed by the shots of their friends. STOCKBRIDGE.

The Services of Gen. Hooker's Division.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I have been allowed to make an extract from a copy of the official report of Maj.-Gen. HOOKER, pertaining to the services of his gallant division from the opening of the campaign in the Peninsula, which I wish you to publish.

After stating that his loss in battle has been 2,866, Gen. HOOKER concludes:

"And in this connection I may be permitted to add, in justice and fidelity to the living and the dead, that the brave officers and men whose honor and welfare were committed to my care, have never slept on the field on which they have fought; that in all of their encounters with the enemy, whether involving the whole force of the division, or down to an affair between the picket-lines, they have inflicted heavier blows than they have received, and under all their trials, privations and dangers, have evinced a cheerfulness, obedience, fortitude and heroism which will never fail to command the gratitude, reverence and admiration of their Chief."

And, I may add, of his countrymen; for when the official records of their services come to light—if they ever do—they will rank the most brilliant chapter in all of our military annals. G. M.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13, 1862.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Welcome to Archbishop Hughes.

On Thursday, some four hundred children from the various Catholic institutions of this City gave Archbishop HUGHES a serenade at his residence, on the corner of Madison-avenue and Thirty-sixth street. The children were dressed in neat Summer costume and one of their number, PETER GILLESPIE by name, read a salutatory address, to which the Archbishop responded in a manner that showed he was sensible of the affection of the little ones. The Archbishop's party consisted of Archbishop PURCELL, of Cincinnati; Archbishop CONNOLLY, of Halifax and Very Reverend WM. STARKS, Vicar-General and Rev. WALTER QUARTER.

After speaking at some length in his usual happy and paternal manner, he concluded as follows:

"I give you, my dear boys, for safe keeping, the address which was presented to me a few evenings ago by the Catholic Young Men's Society of Dublin. I do not mean to allegate it, but I put it in your hands for safe keeping; and so, also, a likeness of our most holy Father. I confide to the custody of the female orphans. All of us, my dear children, have one great adorable Father in Heaven; but we, Catholics, have our most holy Father on earth. He knows you. He has seen your names, all. When a collection of Peter's pence was made some two years ago, I directed that every penny contributed should be recorded with the name of the contributor. Your patrons supplied you each with some small gift, and every name of yours was recorded on the list. The money was sent at the time, but it was said here that the Pope's enemies had acquired sacrilegious possession of the City of Rome. Your names were too sacred to fall into such hands as theirs. However, the day before I left Rome, the long catalogue, beautifully arranged, and extending to a little over a mile in length, reached the Holy City. Since then I have learned that the great visible Head of the Church, our glorious Pius IX., had taken a morning's walk along the line, and that, though he could not read each name, nevertheless the section in which the orphans were presented under their own proper head affected him very deeply. He is, on earth, the Father of us all. To him as the Vicar of Christ, we owe everlasting allegiance in view of his great commission; and in view, also, of our own eternal happiness. You will pray for him as well as for me. You will not meet him as I have had the happiness of doing, except in Heaven, where, if you are good children, you will be sure to see Pius IX."

After this he gave the young speaker the address referred to, which was printed in gold letters on green silk, while to the young girls he gave a full-length portrait of His Holiness the Pope. The accompanying band then played National and patriotic airs, after which the children bade their Spiritual Father farewell.

The Unwearied Workers—The Woman's Central Association.

The original band of loyal sisters known as the "Woman's Central Association," weary not in well doing even in these sultry dog-days, but meet together with the zeal that characterized the formation of their society a little over a year ago. The unbearable closeness of their store and distributing rooms, No. 10 Cooper Union, has induced them to remove one door above, in the same building; and as the room is uninterrupted by partitions, access may be had for contributions of boxes or minor articles at either the Third or Fourth-avenue entrances. They have ceased to supply Western, or any hospitals, save those immediately upon the Atlantic border.

Our local hospitals demand generous aid of them, and receive it full. The floating hospitals, which, for the first few months of their establishment, constituted a heavy responsibility upon their time and supplies, are now given over to the Surgeon-General. Two of their members are resident almoners—or, rather, distributors—at Newport, R. I., and daily accompany a wagon-load of welcome necessaries to the hospital at Portsmouth Grove, near by. The wagon is always surrounded with convalescents, who receive at the hands of the happy distributor many little comforts, beside those thought out by the great mind of the hospital. The management of the Government hospital at Portsmouth Grove, which has been for months very reprehensible, promises well for the future, as the newly appointed Surgeon-in-chief is about entering upon the duties of his office, and a much needed improvement in affairs concerning the welfare of our loyal invalids is confidently looked for. There are at present confined in these hospital wards eighteen hundred patients.

Although the Government has made provision for nurses, the Woman's Central Association hold themselves in readiness to meet any emergency in this respect, and it certainly is no detraction to the wisdom of the founding and recommending parties early employed in this branch of the association, that the women who first assumed the untried part of military nurses under their supervision retain their positions still. Ninety-one responsible nurses have been trained by them and are, for the most part, at present actively employed, sustaining thus far reputations for substantial efficiency.

The Great Cricket Match.

ST. GEORGE VS. QUEENS COUNTY.

The match between the St. George's Club and the Queens County Club, strengthened by many of the best cricketers from other clubs, and different parts of the country, was commenced on Wednesday on the ground of the St. George's Club, Elysian Fields, Hoboken. St. George sent Mr. WALLER and HARRY WRIGHT to the bat, against the finest bowling and fielding which has been seen in any match for a long time, and before they were parted, Mr. WALLER had scored 32runs, by some very pretty play, 3 3s and a 2 being among his figures. Messrs. COMSTOCK and WALLER in turn retired, and Mr. GIBBS succeeded, and before he met HARRY WRIGHT parted company, Harry had gained 15 on the telegraph by good cricket to all parts of the field, in which was a splendid drive for 4, a 5, 2 4s, 1 3s, and 2 2s; his brother—young Charley Wright—succeeded, and entirely disappointed the house and expectations of all not the opposing side, as he was caught at another leg from a "slow," it being a very fine hit. Mr. GRIMES having previously retired, after placing 48 on the bulletin, by his usual fine display of cricket, his figures being 4 4s, 2 3s, and 6 2s. After Mr. GRIMES had joined Mr. GRIMES, fine play continued to be the order of the day, until the latter retired. A close in the game over that distinguished Queens Worsted brought out of his ground a fine cricketer, from whom much was expected—Mr. NEWLAY, who fell as he [illegible] Hampshire, b. Gibbs ... 0 b. GOTHAM VS. MUTUAL.

The return match between these clubs took place yesterday, at Elysian Fields, and ended in another victory for the "Gothams," after a remarkable sharp contest by both nines, as will be inferred from the score. Two home-runs were made by BURTIS and one by MCMAHON. Mr. HUSSON's decisions as umpire were very fair throughout.

A REGULAR "CLEARING-UP" TIME.—The Mercantile Library is at present undergoing a terrible disorganization. Mr. GRANT, the accomplished and universally popular librarian, is in a new business. He has laid down his pen, and at the head of a goodly regiment of scrub-women and whitewashers, singularly contrasting in complexion and professions, is "sweeping along" to a victorious suppression of spider-webs, moth-nests, and that romantic attachment of literature—the inevitable dust. Compilers and commentators, such as were never dreamed of by authors, handle with athletic grasp the choicest blossomings of genius. Theology, mathematics and medicine are jumbled up into one pantheistical myth; Science, moral and political, folios, quartos, octavos and duodecimos; historical, biographical and fictitious, are laid hold of with a will, and banged soundly together, so that any living being having taken umbrage between the long cobwebbed pages stands no ghost of a chance for any other life than to die as it has lived. The whole place, left by the caught up—overturned, and badly—enough it needs, if after two years freedom from the invading army of house-cleaners. A number of members, whose erratic occupation having, as it would appear, passed into history, have, by the benevolence of Mr. GRANT, been pressed into the service as vacancies occurred, and are now actively plies generally, which is done much good in the way of swelling the funds in the savings-bank at the "Newsboys' Lodging-house." The rolls for membership, were increased at the last monthly meeting, and now stand at 42 instead of 41. It is believed, by another year, the fellows' dues will fall from the present rate of 62 to 41. Up to the 1st of May last, the rate of 62 obtained. The number of books delivered to members this year over previous years is 12,000. The reading-room is still open, and will continue so until the reopening of the Cooper Institute reading-room, which is now closed for repairs, and will not be ready for use before the 20th. It

A SERIOUS PROTRACTED DRAWER.—Mr. [illegible] national yesterday afternoon of the loss of [illegible] and of those pic-nickers who of late so much behind the cars and wagon of the City. The lady was rather too vigilant for the thief, and detected him in the act. Upon being directly charged with the theft, he handed over to his injured victim the purse which he had taken, and with it the sum of $10, and then very suddenly took his departure from the stage. The wronged lady promptly pursued him, until a police officer was discovered, who took the offender into custody. He was taken before a Police Magistrate, where he gave his name as [illegible] Stevens, alias Van Norden. Justice KEYES committed him for trial. The balance of the lost money was not recovered.

JOHN KING OVER MORE.—A telegram was received from Washington yesterday, by the United States Marshal, directing the unconditional release of Mr. John C. King, who was arrested the day previous and committed to Fort Lafayette, on a charge of—no one knows what. This is the second time within two weeks that Mr. King has been arrested by orders from Washington, and afterwards peremptorily discharged. It may quiet the fears of the War Department, with reference to the rumor to be informed that, although his name is John King, he is not a descendant of King John, or any other monarch, past or present, but merely a foreman in Mr. WOODWARD's machine-shop, in Beekman-street, and, so far as his employer is aware, a quiet, inoffensive and loyal citizen.

A MURDEROUS ASSAULT BY A STAGE DRIVER.—LEONARD LANE, a stage driver, was arrested yesterday afternoon, charged with a felonious assault with a sharp-edged knife upon the person of THOMAS GIBBS, a laborer employed in the stables of Chas. Crane, & Co. The two men became involved in an altercation at a grocery store on the corner of Grand and Mott-streets, when Lane seized a sharp-edged knife and plunged it several times into the abdomen and breast of his antagonist. The wounds inflicted are so serious that the life of the injured man is considered hopeless. GIBBS was conveyed to the Hospital, and the other party was committed to await the result of the injuries.

FATAL FALL AT A FIRE.—Coroner NEUBERG held an inquest, yesterday, at the New-York Hospital, upon the body of ANDREW HAYE, a native of Ireland, aged 35 years, who died by reason of injuries of the spine, received by an accidental fall from a ladder while attending a fire in Water-street, on the 18th inst. The deceased was a carman by occupation. He went up a ladder for the purpose of assisting some persons in the upper part of the building, and while there the water from the hose struck him with such force that he was violently knocked on the ladder to the sidewalk. The jury rendered a verdict of accidental death.

THE DANGEROUS CONDITION OF THE GRAND-STREET FERR.—An inquest was held yesterday by Coroner WILSON upon the body of a child, aged six years, named ROBERT J. ARTHURS, who came to his death by reason of having accidentally fallen through a hole in the pier at the foot of Grand-street, North River. The child was in company with his mother and several other persons at the time, and about ten minutes after he was missed, they discovered his body floating in the water below. The jury returned a verdict of censure upon the "owners or lessees of the pier for not keeping it in good order."

ARREST FOR ATTEMPTING TO AVOID THE DRAFT.—Four boarding-house runners named THOMAS CHURCHILL, EDWARD LEWIS, WM. CRUMMIN and WM. KELLY, were arrested yesterday afternoon by Sergeant BROWN, of the Fourth Precinct. The prisoners are charged with an attempt to leave the City of [illegible] on a Liverpool ship, for the purpose of avoiding the draft. The parties were conveyed to Police headquarters, where Provost-Marshal BURNETT required them to find bail in the sum of $1,000 each for their appearance when required.

IMPORTANT TO SHIPPERS.—The Treasury Department has issued orders to the Collector of the Customs, that in future all vessels arriving from a Southern domestic port shall remain in charge of an Inspector of the Customs until discharged, and all goods taken in for the return voyage must be by permit of the United States Quartermaster. When the goods are received on board this permit must be signed by the Inspector, and before clearing must be returned by the Inspector, according to regulations now in use for vessels from foreign ports.

THE LAST DAY.—Yesterday was the limit assigned by law for the filing of certificates entitling parties to exemption papers. Since the 1st of August, in the neighborhood of 12,000 persons, resident of the City and County of New-York, have applied to the Clerk for their papers, of whom the majority are alien residents. While the last week the rush has greatly abated, and on the last day there were but very few of the disabled present at the office.

LIEUT.-GEN. SCOTT.—We noticed the veteran Gen. SCOTT driving up Broadway yesterday afternoon. He looked careworn, and by no means so well as when last here, although his cordial and quick recognition of the cheers of the crowd indicated that he was by no means so advanced as to be forgetful of his lifelong country, or unmindful of the regards of his fellow countrymen.

DROWNED WHILE BATHING.—JAMES FELLS, a boy 16 years of age, residing at the corner of Broadway and Sixty-ninth-street, was accidentally drowned while bathing yesterday in the North River. Coroner NAUMANN held an inquest upon the body.

DROWNED.—CHARLES JOHNSON, of Holland, the steward of brig Napoleon, lying in the lower Quarantine, fell overboard, Tuesday night, 12th inst., and was drowned.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL BATES.—The Attorney-General of the United States is now in this City. He is here on important business connected with his Department, and will remain but a few days.

THE BIRTHDAY OF NAPOLEON III.—Yesterday was the birthday of the Emperor of France. In the morning, the French steam-frigate Gassendi fired three salutes, of 21 guns each, in honor of the day.

NEW-JERSEY.

PRIMARY MEETINGS IN JERSEY CITY.—Republican primary meetings for the election of delegates to meet in Convention at Trenton, on Thursday, the 21st inst., to nominate a candidate for Governor, were held throughout Hudson County on Thursday evening. The following gentlemen were chosen delegates:

First Ward—Joel O. Lane, James S. Davenport, J. Owen Rouse, Benj. G. Hann, B. F. Woolsey.

Second Ward—Benj. O'Edge, Wm. Hughes, James H. Love, Joseph G. Edges, John H. Garrison.

Third Ward—J. W. Scudder, B. Van Riper, George Duncan, S. Quaife, Henry A. Greene.

Fourth Ward—Isaac Houston, Jacob Wuest, John W. Pangborn, Peter Miller, John J. Boulton.

The Fifth Ward meeting was adjourned without electing delegates to Monday evening next, at 8 o'clock.

SHOP-LIFTING.—A German man and woman, named HENRY MAYER and ELIZABETH SEIM, were arrested yesterday, in Jersey City, on a charge of stealing an accordeon, valued at $16, from the store of R. S. KASHOW, No. 58 Montgomery-street. The accordeon was subsequently found where it had been thrown by the accused. Recorder MARSHBANKS held them for trial.

ROBBERY.—ELIZA WILSON, a domestic in the family of a Mrs. HALSY, Hoboken, decamped on Thursday, taking with her $80 in money belonging to the latter, and a lot of children's clothing. She has thus far, eluded the Police.

BURGLARY.—The Parsons Fleet Office, in Pavonia-avenue, Jersey City, was broken into on Thursday night, and a small amount of money stolen.

[illegible] Philadelphia has condemned and ordered to be sold, the following vessels and cargoes: Schooners Morning Star, and 575 sacks of salt, 4 cartoys of hold, 2 barrels of copperas, 2 kegs of soda ash, 1 box of cigars and 1 package of ribbons; schooner Catalina and 32 bales of cotton; schooner Velasco and 200 sacks of salt, 50 barrels of mackerel and 500 boxes of herring. The Morning Star and cargo, and Velasco and cargo, are to be sold on the 19th of August; the Catalina and cargo, on the 28th of August.

On Thursday, all but two of the guns of the New Ironsides were mounted. Her stores of shot and shell were on board, nearly all her coal was shipped, and seven hundred men were busily engaged in putting the finishing touches on the craft. The Philadelphians, who are a very hopeful set, now indulge the expectation that the vessel will make her trial trip on Monday. Perhaps she will. We hope so.

The Montreal Herald has information that about a thousand men are detained at Ogdensburg, who were seeking to escape the conscription. From all parts of Upper Canada word comes of men pouring in for the same object. The Burlington Free Press states that the boats and trains North have been crowded for two or three days past with persons going into Canada to escape the draft. Sixteen men, mostly Frenchmen, left the town of Colchester, on the 9th, for Canada, to escape the draft. Numbers are making their way over the line on foot or in wagons. In some cases, persons not American citizens, and therefore not subject to a draft, have left situations and fled.

The Government contract for 100,000 pairs of army bootees, deliverable in thirty, sixty and ninety days, at prices ranging from $1 87 to $2 30 ⅌ pair, was awarded on the 8th inst. The contract was divided up among thirty-four manufacturers of Massachusetts, New-York, New-Jersey and Pennsylvania. The Government also, last week, contracted for a large amount of foreign lead, to arrive from abroad, to the value of over $200,000.

The steamer Thomas Jefferson, one of the People's ferryboats, of East Boston, has been chartered by the Government, and sailed for Fortress Monroe yesterday, under the command of Capt. B. B. McGRAYR, Superintendent of the Ferry. The steamer Nequasset, owned by Capt. SPZAR and others, now employed running to Nahant, has also been chartered by the Government, and has sailed for Fortress Monroe. The new steamer Massachusetts, Capt. CROWELL, which runs between New-Bedford and the Vineyard, has been chartered by the Government, and sailed from New-Bedford on Wednesday, bound to York. The steam ferryboat Winnisimmet, Capt. BATTIS, belonging to the Chelsea Ferry, has cleared from Boston for Fortress Monroe.

SHREWSBURY'S Calico Print Works, at East Greenwich, R. I., consisting of machinery and nearly twenty buildings, containing 30,000 pieces of cloth, were destroyed by fire on Wednesday morning last. The whole loss will probably be found to amount to nearly $200,000. The ascertained loss is of $100,000 in goods, and $50,000 in works. The goods were wholly insured. The following are the names of the Companies at whose offices part of the goods were insured: Liverpool and London Insurance Company, $20,000; Ætna Insurance Company of Hartford, $10,000; Park Insurance Company of New-York, $6,850; American Insurance Company, Providence, $6,000; Slater Mutual Insurance Company, Providence, $4,000; Manhattan Insurance Company, New-York, $3,500; Equitable Insurance Company, Providence, $3,000; Hartford Insurance Company, $3,000; Phœnix Insurance Company, Hartford, $3,000; Charter Oak Insurance Company, Hartford, $3,000; New-England Insurance Company, Hartford, $2,500; Hope Insurance Company, Providence, $2,000; Conway Insurance Company, $2,000. Twenty thousand dollars' worth of the machinery and buildings was insured, viz.: Roger Williams Insurance Company, $5,000 on machinery; Phœnix Insurance Company of New-York, $2,500 on machinery; Exchange Insurance Company of New-York, $2,500 on machinery; Home Insurance Company, New-York, $5,000 on buildings; Security Insurance Company, New-York, $2,500 on buildings; Goodhue Insurance Company, New-York, $2,500 on buildings. Two thousand dollars of the $20,000 were on property which was saved, so that the ascertained loss in buildings and machinery amounts to about $32,000. Upwards of thirty men and about the same number of boys and girls were thrown out of employment.

A fire broke out in the Lenox Glass Works, at Lenox Furnace, Mass., on Tuesday, about noon, and all the buildings of the works were entirely consumed. The loss will probably exceed $30,000, on which there was no insurance. The works have been stopped for several months, but were to be started the present week.

The Stock Market was firm at the close of business yesterday at a fraction improvement on Thursday's last quotation. The price of Gold fell off 1⅛ cent., and Exchange closed ½@¾ ⅌ cent. weaker.

The Queen's Prorogation Speech.

The weighty question of England's relations with America, which has claimed so much attention from Parliament while in session, vindicated its momentous importance by filling the closing hours of that Body. The Queen's Prorogation Speech set the seal to all the official declarations of British policy that have been made in Parliament, by the announcement that "Her Majesty, having from the outset determined to take no part in the contest, has seen no reason to depart from the neutrality which she has steadily adhered to."

It is true this but sums up what has been the course of the British Government, and gives no bonds for future behavior. And yet the very terms of the statement are, in themselves, a species of assurance. For if nothing that has yet occurred has shown any good "reason" for a departure from the straight line of non-interference, nothing is likely to occur that will offer any better "reason." The success of the rebellion is never again likely to present to the eyes of Europe so fair a prospect; the success of the Union cause is never again likely to present so poor a prospect as it has already done. The new and colossal exhibitions of power which the loyal States are now putting forth are of a nature to confirm the Queen's Government in the same policy Her Majesty enunciates so emphatically in the Prorogation speech.

BLACK TRUMP VERSUS WHITE—A POPULAR FALLACY EXPOSED.—Gen. SICKLES, in his speech in Brooklyn, last evening, took occasion to sweep away a fallacy which he finds possessing the minds of laboring men of the North, especially those of foreign birth, and which he regards as one serious obstacle to enlistments. It seems that it is a current belief with them that the war will ultimately end in emancipation, or at least in the liberation of so many blacks that they will crowd our Northern cities, and, by glutting the market with them and slaves, greatly lower the demand for and value of the labor of our white working population. They are loath to help on such a result. In rebutting this notion, Gen. SICKLES did not think it necessary to touch on that cure of the anticipated evil which the President so strongly urges—namely, the deportation of the blacks—and which he had a day or two since presented with renewed earnestness to the deputation of colored men that waited on him. Even if not a negro should be taken out of the country, Gen. SICKLES sees that there are inherent laws, climatic and economical, that would effectually forever prevent the Northern immigration of the freed negroes. Indeed, so great would be the demand for labor, under the combined influence of free production and the increasing demand for the Southern staples, that it would not only absorb all the blacks at the South, but draw to itself all those now in the Northern States. Negroes naturally prefer the climate of the South; they are here only to escape from Slavery, and would seek the South by choice if they could find freedom there. Nothing could be more cogent or more just than this position, and we are glad Gen. SICKLES has presented it to his audience with such lucidity and force.

The Army of the Potomac.

The City was in no little perplexity yesterday in regard to the present position and proposed movements of the Army of the Potomac. On the one hand we had the concurrent outgivings of all the army correspondents for several days past that a grand movement was about to take place, and the unmistakable intimations of two or three that the movement was to be a retrograde one. In corroboration, we had the circumstantial account of the actual transfer of a large part of the men, material and munitions of war to other and better positions, and of the readiness of Gen. McCLELLAN to execute the last part of his programme in the evacuation of Harrison's Landing.

So far, the weight of evidence was cumulative and irresistible that the Army of the Potomac had achieved a grand success in eluding the vigilance of the rebels, and effecting a junction practically with the forces under BURNSIDE and POPE. The rebels themselves seemed to have learned too late that their enemy was abroad, and, by singular coincidence, their Richmond papers announcing Gen. McCLELLAN's movement reached here on the same day with our own account of the matter.

But right in opposition to all this came, and were published by us cotemporaneously, dispatches from Washington, "from persons high in authority," distinctly denying that Gen. McCLELLAN had left his camp at Harrison's Landing, and trying to create the impression, moreover, that he did not intend to remove his army from the peninsula! This confused everything, and put the ingenuity of all strategists at work. Some were at once convinced that all the preparation for a withdrawal of the Army of the Potomac was only an elaborate ruse, meant to deceive the enemy into still further weakening their garrison at Richmond by the marching of heavy detachments in pursuit; and that, when this last depletion was suffered, Gen. McCLELLAN's army, flying light and in fighting trim, with eight days' rations in their haversacks, would suddenly find their columns headed for Richmond, and would march straight into the rebel citadel! The flattering surprise of this speculation inclined many to its adoption; and for aught that the multitude knew, it was as sound a theory to rest on as any.

Later in the afternoon, however, a dispatch was received from Philadelphia, repeating, in a rather mystified and oracular manner, that McCLELLAN had accomplished his grand movements "with perfect safety to his command." In the absence of other lights, we leave the matter where we rested it yesterday, only repeating that if the Army of the Potomac is withdrawn from Harrison's Landing without a battle or an attack, it is the severest disappointment that hard fortune could have poured into the cup of rebel sorrows.

Of this we are now fully assured, that whatever may be the object of the recent operations on the James River—whether to move down or up its banks, or across its stream, and to the rear of the Richmond army—the work will be done as the loyal people would wish it—bravely and successfully. The rebels are evidently thwarted, and on the defensive again. They retreat from before POPE—they vacillate between Richmond and Petersburgh—they move alternately to the north and the south side of the James—and wonder where they will have to meet the coming shock of battle. In the consciousness that their anxieties have once more turned upon their own safety rather than upon schemes of intended invasions northward, we are willing to leave the riddle of the late war rumors to Gen. HALLECK's unfolding. And we commend the people to patient waiting, in which they will find themselves no losers.

LOYALTY NEEDING EXPLANATION.—The Tribune must answer our question about WENDELL PHILLIPS fairly and squarely, or confess that it lacks courage and candor to do so. We dismiss again, as we did yesterday in the most positive terms, the Tribune's statement that we have called on it for any "comparison" of the moral or legal guilt of VALLANDIGHAM and PHILLIPS. Perhaps we can agree wholly with the Tribune in making one an angel of light as compared to the other. But what we demand of the Tribune is the absolute, not the comparative, relation of PHILLIPS to the Government.

The Tribune saves us the trouble of defining Mr. PHILLIPS' position at the present time. As his friend, the Tribune says that he (PHILLIPS) "condemns the struggle now making for the Union as unprincipled and futile, and discourages enlistments in the Union armies."

The copy of the Tribune which contained this editorial statement as to the course of PHILLIPS, contained the following telegraphic dispatch from the West:

"D. A. MAHONEY, editor of the Dubuque (Iowa) Herald, was arrested at an early hour this morning by the United States Marshal. Mr. Mahoney is charged with discouraging enlistments."

Now, will the Tribune answer, Yea or No, whether a man ought to be arrested for "discouraging enlistments"? And if to "discourage enlistments" is to be amenable to law and deserve imprisonment, what should be done with WENDELL PHILLIPS, who, according to the Tribune, "discourages enlistments in the Union armies?" As we understand the matter, if the Government fails to get soldiers, it will not hang a portion of the Abolition Fanatics or Malcontents in the place of it. In either event, the Government must be overthrown.

In saying that we demand explicit and categorical answers to the questions above propounded, we, of course, mean it in a respectful controversial sense. If the Tribune cannot or will not answer, there is an end of it; but in that case, it should say so, and not affect an answer which is no answer at all to questions that are as clear as it is in the power of language to make them. This course is not worthy of the subject or of the Tribune.

Twelve Hundred Thousand Men!

The series of orders from the War Department, which we published yesterday, contains one clause of the highest importance. It provides that, if the old regiments shall not be filled up with volunteers before the 1st of September, a special draft will be ordered for the deficiency. This draft, therefore, will be in addition to the draft to supply the deficiency (if there shall be any) in the levy of 300,000 volunteers, and in addition to the draft for 300,000.

We have not the data from which to judge with any degree of accuracy what the amount of this new and superadded draft will be. To do this it would require that we should know (1) precisely how many regiments there are now in the service and what number of men is needed to complete their complement, and (2) how many of the three hundred thousand volunteers have enlisted in the old regiments. We think it highly probable, however, that not less than two hundred thousand men will be needed to fill up the existing regiments!

It is easy to see that the resort to this mode of filling up the ranks will be attended with some serious disadvantages. The men who are drafted are bound to the service but for nine months—for Congress meet unwisely, as we think, gave the President power to draft for no longer a term. How it is, of course, objectionable to amalgamate nine months men with those in service for the war. But it is still more objectionable not to fill up the regiments at all. The one thing needful is to bring up the present skeleton regiments to their full proportions. We can but hope that the term of service for which they enter will see such good work done that the business for which they are called forth will be practically ended, and no new levies to supply their places be needed.

What an army thus looms up! Crescit eundo. To the six hundred thousand men now under way, this new draft will add at least two hundred thousand, and these joined to the four hundred thousand now in service, give the enormous aggregate of twelve hundred thousand soldiers! These gigantic levies are proof that the Government is really in earnest, and means to prosecute the war with the whole power of the loyal States. This is what the people have been demanding. Who now doubts the ultimate triumph?

THE BADGER LETTER.—A letter was going the rounds of the Northern papers, a few days since, purporting to have been written by Hon. GEORGE E. BADGER, of North Carolina, to a gentleman of New-York, in which the author set forth, with much earnestness, the fact of the entire unanimity of public sentiment in the old North State against a return to the Union. The struggle for the suppression of the rebellion was pronounced hopeless, and the people of the Northern States were urged to stop a vain and fruitless war.

A Washington correspondent has taken the trouble to dispatch his reasons for entertaining doubts of the genuineness of this letter. Without inquiring into the worth and significance of the letter, if authentic, we can safely say that no one at all acquainted with the character and accomplishments of Mr. BADGER ever hesitated a moment in pronouncing it a shallow and contemptible forgery. Mr. BADGER is a scholar and a man of virile mind. The letter is the production of an illiterate booby, who writes about "looking with horror at the thought" of a restored Union.

If the letter was published in the Raleigh, N. C., Standard, from which it was claimed to be quoted, it must have been the work of a desperate trickster striving to accomplish a result by fraud on the eve of the late election.

GEN. H. W. BENHAM.—It was stated in our Washington dispatches, two days ago, that the name of Gen. BENHAM had been stricken from the rolls of the army, and that this was understood to be the official verdict on his course in the unfortunate attack on Secessionville. We accept all action of our military authorities at Washington as conclusive, for there is no appeal; and as well intended, because they have the highest motives for being right.

It is with satisfaction, however, that we learn to-day from our Memphis correspondent that he is simply remanded from his late position as Brigadier-General of Volunteers to his former (and present) rank in the Regular army. To dismiss a soldier outright from the service which he has spent his life in studying, implies the most flagrant and unpardonable derelictions. Nothing but willful insubordination, cowardice, dishonesty or disloyalty, it appears to us, should provoke such signal disgrace. But in all the discussions that Gen. BENHAM's conduct has given rise to, we remember no harsher judgment upon him than that his zeal was apt to outrun his discretion.

REBEL VICTORIES VIA CHICAGO.—Chicago sent us a first-rate sensation dispatch yesterday. It was the announcement of a severe battle at Tazewell, near Cumberland Gap, East Tennessee, in which the rebels, numbering twelve or fourteen thousand, under Gens. STEVENSON and BARTOW, had surrounded and routed the National forces and thereby regained possession of East Tennessee. From these auspicious premises, the Southern correspondent of the Chicago Press did not fail to deduce the natural and logical sequence, the early annihilation of Gen. BURNSIDE, and the grand smash generally of Union things in Tennessee.

Since the veracious correspondents of the Chicago journals, retained in Tennessee at great expense, sent sixteen English iron clad gunboats into Mobile harbor, breaking the blockade and reopening that port to the world, their exciting dispatches have been received with some grains of caution. We have not, [illegible] Fanatics or Malcontents in the place of it. In either event, the Government must be overthrown.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

Troops Under the New Call Beginning to Arrive.

The Secesh of Maryland Leaving for the South.

Delay in the Issue of the Stamp Currency.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Aug. 15.

TROOPS BEGINNING TO ARRIVE.

Gen. CASEY's new Union, lately discussed in the papers, began to-day, the troops under the new call having begun to take the field. Great admiration is expressed for the first regiment New-York has sent out—that of VAN VALKENBURGH and DIXON, members of the present Congress, who are Colonel and Lieutenant-Colonel. This regiment has the honor of being the first organized, mustered and put into the field under the President's new call. It will be remembered that Mr. DIXON made a farewell speech in Congress the day after the President's call for 300,000 men, announcing his and VAN VALKENBURGH's departure to raise troops, and saying that they did so at Mr. LINCOLN's personal request. Their regiment is recruited up to the maximum strength, and some three hundred more have been raised and left behind as a nucleus for a new regiment.

THE NEW STAMP CURRENCY.

The new postage stamp bills for small change were expected to begin arriving from the engravers in New-York to-morrow; but it is understood now that they will not come till about Tuesday next. The Post-office Department turns them over to the Treasury, and it distributes only through the regular Treasury depositories. At first no orders will be filled except for small amounts, so as to throw them into as general circulation as possible at once.

ARRESTS IN FREDERICKSBURGH.

The steamer Keyport has brought up a guard from Gen. BURNSIDE's Division, having in custody Maj. SLAUGHTER and fourteen other prominent citizens from Fredericksburgh, who are charged with secretly aiding and abetting the enemy, and giving them information of the movements of our army. They were conveyed immediately to the old Capitol Prison. Another batch of the same description of persons are expected here to-night from the same locality.

ADDITIONAL APPOINTMENTS.

The following additional appointments have been made under the Internal Revenue law:

CONNECTICUT.—First District—Mark Howard, of Hartford, Collector; Alphonso C. Crosby, of Vernon, Assessor. Second District—Hon. John Woodruff, Ex-Congressman of New-Haven, Collector; Jno. B. Wright, Assessor. Third District—Ezra Dean, of Woodstock, Collector; Jesse S. Ely, of Newark, Assessor. Fourth District—David F. Hollister, of Bridgeport, Collector; Reuben Rockwell, of Colebrook, Assessor.

NEW-JERSEY.—First District—Hon. S. Sharp, of Salem, Collector, and Josiah C. Sparks, Carpenter's Landing, Assessor. Second—Stephen R. Smith, of Hopewell, Collector; George W. Cowperthwaite, of Jones' River, Assessor. Third—Reuben Marsh, of Plainfield, Collector; Robert Reesing, of Hocketstown, Assessor.

EXODUS OF THE MARYLAND SECESH.

Secessionists in Maryland are leaving at several points in large numbers, going South to enter the rebel service to avoid the draft. Advices from Poolesville say that on Tuesday night nearly a hundred rebels left there for that purpose.

ANOTHER WAY.

The Post-office Department receives on an average seventy-five to a hundred letters per day from New-York State alone, making applications for confirmations for appointments to Assistant-Postmasterships to avoid drafting. In one day Oneida County alone sent fifteen such applications.

THE DRAFT IN DELAWARE.

It is understood that the mission of the Delaware Delegation, whose arrival here was announced the other day, was to represent to the President and the War Department the necessity of having drafting in their State, under the management of loyal men. The State is without a Militia law. If the draft is enforced, therefore, there will be almost unlimited power in the hands of the Governor to arrange the draft so as to take out any class he might want removed. It is easy to see how the draft might thus be made an agent for political purposes. As Delaware has not only a Legislature to elect this Fall, but the election of United States Senator depends on the new Legislature, as well as the question of emancipation and other important matters, it is deemed specially desirable that no such political advantage be granted to a Governor, of whom the least that can be said is that he is not an earnest war man.

RETURNING SOLDIERS.

Soldiers are daily brought hither from various points, as well as being returned from the different hospitals, where they have been employed during convalescence in the performance of hospital duty, for the purpose of rejoining the regiments; preparatory to which they are quartered in the Soldiers' Rest. A considerable number of these conveyed to this city are deserters, some of whom have been away from their regiments for the space of half a year, and had engaged in business pursuits. These will be remanded to await their trial by Court-martial. It is estimated that the daily arrival of soldiers of this character at the present time averages nearly 200.

THE CASE OF GEN. BENHAM.

My statement that Gen. BENHAM's name was stricken from the rolls of the army was correct; but I should have explained that it was from the rolls of the Volunteer Army. He has ceased to be a Brigadier-General, his authority for command in the field having again and again been demonstrated till the Government could no longer remain blind to the fact. He is Major of Engineers, however, in the Regular Army, and from that position has not been removed. It confines him entirely to duties with which he is acquainted, and which give him no control of troops in active service. BENHAM is here now appearing in citizen's clothes.

GEN. M'CALL.

As already announced, Gen. McCALL has been released. He arrived here, this evening, on a short furlough, for his health.

SENATOR HARRIS.

Senator HARRIS is here.

THE EAST TENNESSEE REPORT.

A Repetition of the Rebel Story of the Battle of Tazewell, &c.

CINCINNATI, Friday, Aug. 15.

The Times, of this city, has the following special dispatch:

MAYSVILLE, Tenn., Wednesday, Aug. 13.

A battle commenced on the 7th inst., at Tazewell, seven miles from the Cumberland Gap, between the Confederate forces, under Gen. STEVENSON, numbering from twelve to fifteen thousand men, and the Federals at that place, numbering 4,000.

The movement was made in force by Gen. STEVENSON, while Gen. BARTOW attacked the rear of the Federal forces by forced marches, and completely surrounded them.

A desperate fight of four hours' duration ensued, terminating in the surrender of the Federals.

The Federals were driven by superior numbers in front, and when in full retreat were repulsed by a flanking force of the rebels.

The rebels are thus in possession of East Tennessee again.

Their next move will be on Gen. BURNSIDE, with overwhelming force.

Gen. BRAGG is at Chattanooga, concentrating with Gen. BRAGG. Their combined force is not less than 70,000 men.

The rebel Gen. CASEYER was killed near his residence, at Knoxville, on the 6th inst.

A schooner from Havana ran the blockade of Mobile on the 7th instant. She had a cargo of salt, ammunition, and cavalry equipments.

A Vicksburgh letter says that the streets of that city are beginning to assume their former lively appearance. Refugees are returning and opening places of business. All the damages to the city by the Federal shells will be repaired within a month.

MORE REBEL REPORTS.

CAIRO, Friday, Aug. 15.

The Grenada Appeal of the 9th, says that Baton Rouge is in the hands of BRAGG'S men, and that he captured four regiments and six transports and sunk two gunboats.

The same paper has a dispatch dated Knoxville, 7th, which places the Federal loss at Tazewell, near Cumberland Gap, at 600, and says that the fight lasted two days.

A FALSE REPORT.

LOUISVILLE, Friday, Aug. 15.

A dispatch from the commanding General at Cumberland Gap says that the Richmond Examiner's story, of the 9th instant, concerning the capture of BOWER's command, is false. There is no Gen. BOWER in the command referred to.

Skirmishing with the Guerrillas—Captured Soldiers Paroled.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Thursday, Aug. 14.

The expedition to Gallatin was fired into on its return here, when three miles from Gallatin. One man was killed and two wounded. We returned the fire and killed several rebels and recaptured a wagon load of guns.

Col. BOONE and his command of 120 men, captured by the rebels, have been paroled.

FROM FORTRESS MONROE.

Arrival of Gov. Sprague—More Sick Soldiers—Nothing New from Harrison's Landing.

FORTRESS MONROE, Thursday, Aug. 14.

The steamboat Port Royal arrived here early this morning, with Gov. SPRAGUE on board, from Aquia Creek.

Mr. ISAAC SEARING was accidentally drowned at this place, while bathing, last evening. He had been employed for several months in driving ambulances, with the mails, between Hygeia, Mill Creek, and Chesapeake Hospitals. He has two married sisters, one living in New-York City, and one in Troy, N. Y. They can obtain information in regard to his effects, and the wages due him, by applying to Dr. GRAHAM, Medical Director, Fortress Monroe.

The mailboat from Harrison's Landing arrived at Fortress Monroe at 4 o'clock. She brings no news of importance.

The steamer George Washington arrived here last evening, at 7 o'clock, from Harrison's Landing, with 300 sick soldiers, most of whom are convalescent and will be able to return to duty in a week or two.

Marine Disasters.

A telegraph dispatch to the Merchant's Exchange and News Room, Fine-street, states that schooner Oriole, with a valuable cargo of 300 tons of iron ore, belonging to the Jackson Iron Mining Company, was totally lost on Lake Superior. Date and particulars not given. The vessel was insured in New-York and Buffalo.

GEORGE FRANCIS TRAIN.—Mr. TRAIN is probably the best living example of our old style of strong speakers. Dashing, defiant, rapid, full of humor, full of spread-eagleism, and of a kind of eloquence always popular in this young country. He never thinks what he says so that it reads and sits up the hearers of his sermons. His recent series of speeches in London on American topics, delivered before large popular audiences, and published for sale widely, have not only exhibited "Young America" to old John Bull, but have brought our side of public questions before thousands of Englishmen who had no other means of information, but the misrepresentations of London. He has his speeches reported and corrected, and sends them over for publication in the leading journals of Boston. His latest effort, we learn, is by far his greatest, and strikes Mr. Bull in a tender place. It is on the "Downfall of England," and will be found in the number of the Commercial Bulletin which appears this morning, and which can be had in this City, at our advertisement in another column.

THE GERMAN REPUBLICAN CENTRAL COMMITTEE.—This influential body met last evening at 8 o'clock, at the Steuben House, on the Bowery, Mr. ARNEMAN WILLMANN in the Chair, and Mr. HENRY RICHARD, acting Secretary. The object of the meeting was to take consent concerning the method of representing the Committee in the Central State Committee, at its next session. A number of drafts of resolutions etc. were prepared, but as only one Ward was represented in the meeting, no decisive action was had. The Committee, however, protracted its sittings until a late hour.

DEPENDENCY OF LABOR.

...of the War Upon Mechanical Industry.

...ability of a Premium—Strikes—Increase of Wages ...Progress of the Government Works Interfered with.

Although the opponents of the financial schemes and the Government generally, an enormous taxation, the process of the conscription of life, and consequent ...the working classes among us, it is felt that labor is now in demand, and able to a great extent to dictate terms to capital. Instead of the bloody times of state, the anxiety upon banks and the general distress of working men, which was so confidently predicted as the result of the war, we find that in both agricultural and mechanical industry, the employers are well paid, and there is room for more; that farm hands never commanded better pay, and that in this City at least a number of strikes in the last week have resulted in procuring increased compensation for labor—an increase in many cases amounting to twenty per cent., and in some instances exceeding for any depreciation of currency. There seems to be every probability that those who escape the draft will from this appreciation of wages, be well able to bear the pecuniary burdens which the vigorous prosecution of the war may impose upon them. There can be no question that the withdrawal of so many working men by the draft, and of volunteers which this City has furnished, has damaged business, but the evil has been in a great extent remedied by the wonderful activity displayed by our people in varied employments. If a man found he could not make a living by making ladies' shoes, he soon begged to make army shoes; if he found the manufacture of pocketing decreased, he soon apply his knowledge of the use of tools and machinery in the construction of arms; workers in leather were turned to make army accoutrements, and workers of leather and printing presses found little difficulty in applying their skill to the creation of iron-clads.

The vast amount of Government work, in the way of ship-stores, now under contract in this City and vicinity, has given a great impetus to our mechanical industry. All our great ship-yards, foundries and machine-shops are in full blast, swarming with busy hands, and eagerly seeking more. The many iron-clads, monitors and rams—for there are really many—which we have in course of construction, have brought into requisition every man who could draw a plan, mold a casting, manage a lathe, or handle a file. The wages paid are as good as ever, and on the business set rapidly in in the natural result when men find out they can command it. Indeed, it may be that the news of our activity in this department of industry will soon induce a large immigration of the class of mechanics required.

We believe that the conscripts that the draft soon to be enforced will leave them powerless to complete their contracts, that application has been made to the Government to exempt all employes on Government work, whose places cannot be supplied. It is pretty certain that this course will be adopted, for what skilled workman is there who cannot perform more effective military service by working on an iron-clad than by carrying a musket? The cartridge-makers and others whose occupation requires little manual skill or dexterity, must, of course, take their chance of conscription, as their places may readily be supplied by females.

Indeed, in other departments of labor—in typesetting, in clerkships, in all light manufactures where female hands may be employed, they will take the place of the volunteer or conscript males, do almost as much for the family, promote the cause of woman's rights, and beautifully illustrate the fact, that "it's an ill wind that blows nobody good."

Of course, the manufacturers of luxuries—the silversmiths, jewelers, perfume printers, lithographers and engravers—must suffer in times like these. But, the demand for work of that kind of work to do, there are also fewer hands to do it, and most all who have the slightest versatility of talent are enabled to change their occupations.

This is exemplified in the occupation of plate pin ting. While in the ordinary business of the engraver and plate printer, there is little doing, the vast amount of printing required for the Government Treasury notes and stamps—most of which are executed in this City—has actually furnished more employment for plate printers than was ever known before. The machinists have been called upon to build new presses, and every man who has the slightest knowledge of plate printing has been pressed into the service, and called for more. The similarity of lithographic printing, therefore, enables the lithographic printer, who would otherwise be idle, to change his employment and keep at work.

The army has certainly carried off all the surplus labor. Employers who deny that there is any deficiency of hands, admit that they do not have as many applicants for work, and that the wages paid are those of prosperous times. There is not the choice of hands that exists in slack times.

For more manual labor there is a want of hands. This is accounted for by the fact that the bounties, pay, and species of life insurance which the soldier gets, far exceed in pecuniary value the amount paid for ordinary manual labor. It would seem to be from a knowledge of this fact that the street-sweepers in three of our Wards struck the other day. They refused to work for a dollar per diem, and demanded a dollar and a quarter. The increase was paid by the contractor, who threatened to employ—not other men, but the machine street-sweepers. The City Inspector, however, says that men are constantly applying to him for work.

Some idea of the comparative resources of the Northern and Southern population may be formed from the fact that while the South has just commenced its draft on the reserve—between the ages of 35 and 50—we have not yet commenced our first draft, and that even now, the withdrawal of our laboring population is just beginning to be felt. While the older men of the South are just going into the field, ours will be filling the places of the young conscripts. This is very good for our older men, and another illustration of the "ill wind," &c. principle. The Southern leaders predicted that our industry would be paralyzed because our laborers would have to do the fighting; while they could leave their slaves to till while they went to battle. The fact seems to be that those of the North who do work will have only to work a little harder, and get better paid for it, in order to help those who go to the wars.

The present aspect of the labor market is therefore encouraging of the laborer and to the employer, for, after all, their interests are identical, and, in spite of the war, we seem more likely to have strikes than bread riots; that we will be kept busy in clothing our army, feeding the world, building our iron navy, and developing home manufactures, until the reopening of the great cotton marts by the conquering of the rebellion shall give us again the grateful sound of the loom and the spinning-jenny.

AN APPEAL TO THE LADIES.

Are the ladies of our country flagging in their praiseworthy efforts for the cause of the Union? Do they feel the renewed impulse of zeal and patriotism which the last few weeks have given? Hitherto they have been no whit behind the sterner sex in their proper sphere. But now the tremendous increase of our army calls for a corresponding increase in the ranks of those whose part it is to heal and comfort, to minister to the wants of the sick and suffering, to nurse, clothe and feed the heroes whom wounds or sickness have overtaken in their course of hard and wearisome warfare. A glorious and blessed part indeed have the ladies of our country played in this terrible war. Witness the "lint of comfits, clothing, delicacies and luxuries their skilful and generous hands have poured into our hospitals; witness the delicate and soothing attentions so many have received at their kind hands; witness the holy consolations administered to the dying sufferer, and the cheerful congratulations given to the convalescent. Many a blessing has been invoked from the lips of pain and sickness upon them, by men whom their tender care has wakened to a sense of thankfulness long forgotten. Many a death-bed has been made holy by their presence and prayers, and many a fond and grateful look has been given by bright, dying eyes upon the pure and holy women who have made that dying bed a bed of ease and hope. If more quiet and unobtrusive, their sphere is no less useful and important than that of the men. It is to the honor of the ladies that they have uniformly and eagerly filled this sphere in the past short history of our troubles; now, however, an increased ardor must be felt, a new impulse given. Our army is doubled; let the array of needles and skillful fingers be redoubled, and let the kind hearts of our women prompt their ingenious heads to contrive means by which our cause may be furthered and our troubles lightened. Let them not falter in their visits to our hospitals; let them continue the light which their presence diffuses through the crowded wards; let them collect money from their private purses to aid the families of the volunteers; let them send to the army and to the hospitals their delicate preserves, and the clothing, and bandages and lint which their skillful hands prepare; and let them be sure, that in so doing they are playing not a small or unimportant part in this great tragedy, and let them expect the gratitude of the whole army and of the whole country.

Dr. R. Hunter on Galloping Consumption.

LETTER NO. XI.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

SIR: I have said that the common form of Consumption is called "Chronic," because of its slow progress; and I now purpose to speak of another form of this disease, which, from the fearful rapidity of its progress, is properly known as "Galloping Consumption." It is no unusual thing for a person apparently in good health to catch cold and die in from six to ten weeks from this form of Consumption. It almost always begins with a cold, which sets in with great violence, and is felt from the first to be deep within the chest. From the beginning there is usually some cough, fever and night sweats—difficulty of breathing and a great sense of oppression on the chest. At the end of a week expectoration commences, but the matter resembles much more that of a recent cold than that of Consumption.

There are few symptoms by which this disease can be distinguished from a low form of inflammation of the lungs, for it is generally mistaken by inexperienced practitioners, and maltreated. Indeed, its symptoms are so unlike those of the common form of consumption that its nature is generally denied until after death, when, upon examination, the whole internal surface of the air-tubes, the air-cells, and even the substance of the lungs, is found thickly studded with tubercles. This disease is most common in young persons between the ages of fifteen and twenty-five, of full habit, clear complexion and ruddy cheeks, though it sometimes occurs much later in life.

There is another form of consumption, also rapid in its progress, which occurs in young persons of delicate constitution who have habitually cold hands and feet. These have commonly an inherited predisposition to consumption. Their circulation is feeble, and they become weak, fatigued, and out of breath on every slight exertion. In such cases the destroyer steals silently upon his victim—the patient scarcely feels ill—there is but little cough, no pain, no spitting of blood, often no expectoration. Having always been short-breathed and liable to colds, when cough does occur it is attributed to a little fresh cold. Gradually the countenance becomes pale, the lips lose their color, and the eyes sunken, with a dark or bluish line beneath them. Under these circumstances, without any increase of cough or expectoration, diarrhœa occurs, and, after a few exhausting discharges, the patient dies without a struggle, perhaps sitting up in a chair, or in a fainting fit, from which the friends strive in vain to rouse him.

My next letter will be on Latent Consumption.

Your obedient servant,
ROBERT HUNTER, M. D.

HERRING'S SAFE AGAIN THE CHAMPION!

PHILADELPHIA, August 11, 1862.

Messrs. Farrel, Herring & Co., No. 629 Chestnut-street:

Gents: On Friday, the 8th inst., I was so unfortunate as to have my Planing Mills totally destroyed by fire, together with their contents, the machinery being melted by the intensity of the heat; in fact, the only articles saved were contained in one of your invaluable Safes, which, although exposed to an intense heat for many hours, to my surprise and gratification, rendered up its contents in a perfect state of preservation; the brass plate on front of safe was melted.

Please send me one of your No. 2 Folding-door Safes to run until permanently situated, when I will make arrangements for a larger one. I. B. M. DOLBY.

HERRING'S PATENT CHAMPION FIRE PROOF SAFES.—The best and most reliable security from fire now known.

MATHEWS'
ARNICA
HAIR GLOSS

This is a new and invaluable preparation for preserving and beautifying the hair. The wonderful virtues of Arnica in allaying and removing inflammation are universally known.

ARNICA HAIR GLOSS
is a combination of these virtues, with other tried and excellent ingredients.

ARNICA HAIR GLOSS
stimulates and invigorates the hair, prevents it from falling out—restores it when lost—promotes its growth and strength—renders it proof against all diseases.

ARNICA HAIR GLOSS
permanently cures all irritations and eruptions of the scalp, and makes it healthy and fertile. For the removal of dandruff it has no equal. Its operations in this particular are magical and permanent.

ARNICA HAIR GLOSS
is unequaled as a hair-dressing compound. It not only cleanses the scalp and invigorates the hair, but it renders the latter charmingly soft and lustrous. Its odor is particularly delicate and fragrant—the proprietor having taken especial pains to secure this result.

NOTICE.

All those who went to seek Gen. KEARNY'S SIGH'S CORPS are hereby invited to join, at once, my regiment. The following letter will explain my position:

NEW-YORK, Aug. 9, 1862.

Col. Oliver Spaulding, New-York:

Concerning I am authorized by the Secretary of War to assure the Governor of New-York that three regiments of infantry raised in this State will be assigned

—The Guadeloupe in the Spanish navy and Rosa's steamer of bancroft copy, and Rosa Mexico, the Mexican Indian Rosa's steamer of one Mr. Greenwald, a German, who was shot by the guerrillas, they said, while tied upon a stretcher. Mr. Greenwald, who had been with Rosa when he was taken sick with fever, was to be shot, was released by order of the expedition. Captain Rosa, who was supposed to be shot, was released by order of the expedition. Each of the three gentlemen was released for him in exchange for Rosa's officer, following his capture, and was sent to Matamoras, where he was taken to Gen. Villalva, who sent him on to Brownsville, where he was taken to Gen. Phillips, who sent him on to Fort Clark, and also the officer who had released him, Rosa, and Mr. Waite, who had been with Mr. Greenwald, were sent with Mr. Greenwald to Brownsville, and Mr. Waite, who had been with Mr. Greenwald, was released by order of the expedition. It is thought that the parties who had released Rosa, and who had taken him from the Gen. Phillips, were taken from the Gen. Phillips, and Mr. Greenwald's money, amounting to $1,000 in gold and silver, and $5,000 in notes, were returned to him, and he was allowed to return home. It has been reported to Mr. Greenwald that he was transferred and Mr. Waite, who had been with Mr. Greenwald, was released by order of the expedition. He decided to wait soon

Things of Those Toward the Seat of War.

THE GREAT MOVEMENT BEGUN.

THE SENATOR SEWARD.

The splendid new uniforms served out to the Seward Brigade are having an stimulating effect upon the brave class of young men who stand personal yearly amongst their constituents. Personal vanity and courage were always an equation, though and a letter to all the boys for taking a pride in his personal appearance. The Brigade recruiting station in the Park has a crowd about it all day long.

THE DEWITT MORAVIES.

The Fifth is a fine instance in point, of how pride in personal appearance and a distinctive uniform, will promote to a regiment its worst do credit that makes been possessing a modicum of good conduct in camp, and Palestine of bravery in battle. It is to be hoped the recruits for the Fifth will have uniforms given them like their predecessors, otherwise the Sewards will be served out to them one straightly. Let the regiment have one of the new French sets of uniforms. Recruits come in rapidly to Capt. Cass at his station opposite the St. Nicholas Hotel, on Broadway.

HAWKINS' ZOUAVES.

A number of respectable young men have volunteered into this famous organization. They could not select a better. They will find suitable companionship, plenty of gathered laurels to share, and plenty of fresh laurels in store for them to help in gathering.

METROPOLITAN GUARD.

Lieut. JAMES H. BRADLEY, who acted as Aid-de-Camp to Col. RIKER, of the Anderson Zouaves, when that gallant officer was slain, has been appointed by Gov. MORGAN Adjutant of the First Regiment of the Metropolitan Guard. Lieut. BRADLEY was interested by Gen. CODY for bravery and coolness on the field. The First Metropolitan Guard is nearly filled, and will probably be the first ready of the City regiments. The Second Metropolitan Guard is doing well. It will be more distinctively a police regiment than its predecessors, many policemen joining it to escape the draft, and a number of captains and sergeants accepting commissions in it as officers. Gen. VAN VRANKEN inspected the First Regiment on Thursday afternoon, in their camp at Staten Island. He expressed himself to Col. TAUSSIG as delighted with the appearance of the men.

FIFTH SENATORIAL DISTRICT REGIMENT.

Col. ELIAS PARSONS can now parade some six hundred men, and the prospects are he will muster in the minimum regimental number before next week is through. The Senatorial Committee of his District are working hard for him, and he has some energetic and indomitable officers who are determined to fill up their companies with volunteers. The camp at Turtle Bay is one of the liveliest places in the neighborhood of the City. Headquarters, Lincoln Hall, Houston-street, and there are several recruiting tents in the Park.

FIRST NATIONAL VOLUNTEERS.

The two companies of "Monitors" have been a powerful reinforcement to Col. GURNEY's First National Volunteers. With these and the men he has otherwise enlisted he can parade between five and six hundred men. Headquarters, Mozart Hall, No. 618 Broadway. Recruiting stations all over the City.

COL. ULLMANN'S REGIMENT.

Men who want the whole of their bounty directly they enlist should volunteer with Lieut. BISSOR, who is detailed to fill up Col. DANIEL ULLMANN's, now before the enemy. Lieut. BISSOR has a fund at his disposal, from which these bounties are at once discharged, without waiting for official formalities. He is situated at the wooden hut on the main line of traffic through the City Hall Park.

ARTHUR ARTILLERY.

The recruiting tents of this corps in the Park are doing a brisk business. The artillery service is well paid, and has many special attractions to young men of an adventurous turn of mind.

CONVALESCENTS RETURNING.

Col. PRIME, of the Fifth New-Hampshire Regiment, yesterday left the Park Barracks with fifty convalescent soldiers, to join his regiment at the seat of war. There are only about half a dozen invalids now in the Park Barracks.

STANTON LEGION.

The Stanton Legion, Colonel W. H. ALLEN, has now in quarters, in the camp at New-Dorp, and on recruiting service in the City, over four hundred and fifty men. It is the earnest desire of the officers of the Stanton Legion, that the regiment shall be filled altogether with volunteers, and from present prospects they will be successful. The following is a list of officers of the Stanton Legion, appointed up to this date: Colonel, W. H. ALLEN; Lieutenant-Colonel, ——; Major, R. L. Van Wagenen; Adjutant, W. W. Horton; Quartermaster, U. S. Love; Surgeon, W. R. Rockwell, M. D.; Captains, W. H. Jenner, C. A. Du Moulin, D. Tuomey, J. W. Drummond, W. F. Penfield, W. H. Badger, —— Le Gendre, N. Servatius, —— Chappel, J. H. Brennan, G. Tucker; First Lieutenants, A. B. Marston, H. Morrison, W. H. Van Brunt, —— Ferra, —— Connelly, L. O. V. Ham, J. Flynn, W. L. Lindsay, —— Black; Second Lieutenants, —— Henderson, —— Thompson, W. H. Poole, R. Reilley, C. F. Brennan. Recruits of Companies A and F, Capts. JENNER and DU MOULIN, are received at their tents in the Park, and also for Capt. JENNER's Company at the Regimental Headquarters, No. 174 Grand-street.

AN OFFER TO THE FAMILIES OF VOLUNTEERS.

Mr. ALEXANDER OWSBANDER, of 299 Broadway, offers his services free of charge to the families of all persons residing in this city volunteering after to-day, under the present calls, in obtaining bounties, arrears of pay, allowance, pension, &c., to which they may be entitled by the disability of the volunteer during service.

AN AID FUND FOR THE FAMILIES OF VOLUNTEERS.

Washington Chapter, No. 2, O. U. A., at its meeting on August 14, passed a resolution appropriating the sum of $2 per week to the families of each of its members who should volunteer for the war.

GEN. HILLHOUSE'S ORDER.

A CORRECTION.

Owing to an imperfection in our copy of Adjt.-Gen. HILLHOUSE's order relative to drafting, an error was made in the last sentence of the first section of the document. It should have read:

"To enable the Commissioners to comply with this provision, they will cause to be written or printed on the ballots, in addition to the name, the town in which the person resides; and whenever the number of names drawn for any town shall equal the deficiency of such town, they will reject all ballots drawn subsequently representing residents of such town."

PATRIOTISM OF SECRETARY SEWARD.

We stated yesterday the fact that Secretary SEWARD proposed to raise fifteen volunteers by the State Department, as its quota. A little incident, which occurred yesterday, still further illustrates Secretary SEWARD's patriotism. During the morning he sent a note to Capt. HASBROUCK, (who is engaged in recruiting District soldiers,) requesting him to send to his office eight recruits. They were sent, and as soon as they appeared before the Secretary, he handed one of them a neat little package, upon which they retired and opened the mysterious envelope, when, to their surprise, they discovered a fifty-dollar Treasury note for each one of them.—Washington Star, 15th.

THE POLICE AND THE VOLUNTEERS.

IMPORTANT ACTION OF THE DEPARTMENT.

CENTRAL DEPARTMENT, METROPOLITAN POLICE, NEW-YORK, AUG. 14, 1862.

The Board of Police is successfully engaged in raising two regiments to serve during the war, and it is believed that several regiments could be speedily raised, if the Board could satisfy the solicitude of recruits that their families would be subsisted during their absence.

For this purpose, and that the quota required of the State should be obtained by voluntary enlistment, rather than by draft, the Board of Police respectfully solicit subscriptions from the public. If means by the liberality of citizens be provided for the subsistence of the families of recruits, it will be distributed in the following manner:

First—The families of recruits will be classified according to Police Precincts.

Second—The numbers and ages of the families of each recruit will be ascertained by personal visitation of a competent policeman of the Precinct in which the family may reside.

Third—The reports of the policeman so detailed will be recorded in a book at the Station-house of the Precinct and at the Central Department.

Fourth—On every alternate Monday, after the departure of the First Regiment, each family will be visited by a patrolman, whose duty will be to inquire into the health and condition of the families visited, and whether any complaint or cause of complaint exists, and to report the same to the Board of Police.

The Board of Police will be ready to receive the money and receipt for the same, and to make the distribution of the money to the families of the volunteers.

Subscriptions to be paid to the Chamberlain of the City of New-York, or to the Treasurer of the Board of Police, and receipts for the same will be given by the Board of Police.

The Board of Police will be ready to receive the names of volunteers, and to enroll them, and to make the distribution of the money to the families of the volunteers.

The Board of Police will be ready to receive the money and receipt for the same
